Disillusioned with the Qing dynasty approach against the boxing rebellion, where Chinese Christians were particularly targeted at murder[35], Wong decided to search for a new settlement abroad, focusing on areas of Southeast Asia. [36] Before arriving at Sarawak, Wong had searched for other areas in Malaya and Indonesia to settle, though unsuccessful. [37] Wong obtained a Charles Brooke approval to search for a new settlement in the Rajang river curve called "Tanjung Maling" in front of the current city of Sibu near the confluence of the Igan and Rajang rivers. [19] The third division of Sarawak (now Sibu Division) under the Brooke administration was established on 1 June 1873. ^ Hii, Philip (4 April 2011). 21 February 2013. ^ "3,000 cyclists meet at Sibu Town Square." ^ "History of the Sibu Municipal Board". 29 July 2011. ^ "Mengenai Hospital (About the
